Jumping Jack Flash

A Tribute to The Rolling Stones

About

Jumping Jack Flash is a theatrical tribute to the Rolling Stones built around the look, feel, and sound of the band's early years, then expanded into a live retrospective covering 50 years of their career. The show presents Mick, Keith, Charlie, Bill, and Brian Jones in performance, with close attention to stage movement, wardrobe, instrumentation, and the band's onstage dynamic.

Framed as concert-theater, the performance combines live music with witty stage banter, on-stage video projection, and multiple wardrobe changes designed to place the audience back in the swinging 60s. The set draws from all periods of the Stones' career, with selections from across the catalog.

The production is built around detailed re-creations of song performances, period styling, and stage presentation. For buyers looking for a Rolling Stones tribute with a strong visual concept and a full-show format rather than a standard cover set, Jumping Jack Flash offers a clear, era-driven presentation.
