LONG LIVE COUNTRY MUSIC

Tribute to Country Music

About

LONG LIVE COUNTRY MUSIC is a two-hour country cover show built around current hits, classic staples, and a cast that shifts between the looks, voices, and personalities of the artists they portray. It is not an impersonator show, but the presentation clearly nods to the biggest stars and their songs.

The set pulls from a wide country range, with material associated with artists including Lainey Wilson, Jason Aldean, Cody Johnson, Miranda Lambert, Brooks & Dunn, Brad Paisley, Carrie Underwood, and Luke Combs. The pace is non-stop, covering as much ground as possible from country music's long history to connect with audiences of different ages.

A sit-down acoustic segment changes the feel mid-show. With the cast gathered in a circle on stage, the show turns to country legends and timeless songs tied to names such as Merle Haggard, Hank Williams, Willie Nelson, Alabama, Charley Pride, Johnny Cash, Toby Keith, Garth Brooks, and George Strait.

The format also includes short headline segments from up-and-coming country artists performing original music. The source text specifically names Collin Donley among the young national and regional singers featured. Ronnie Lee Keel hosts the show and adds his voice, music, and presence to every concert.

The backing band is centered in Las Vegas. Scott Woodward handles bass, vocals, and bandleader duties, with MacKenzie Kerr on drums, Brian Shute on guitar, and Jason Haven on lead guitar.

There is also a patriotic thread that runs through parts of the performance, especially during American country anthems that can draw a strong audience reaction. After the show, there is a free meet and greet for photos and hellos with the cast.
